Donor Spotlight — FMA Communications

Community-Driven Giving

While the nonprofit organization as a business model dates only to the 20th Century, groups have been organizing for charitable or religious causes for thousands of years. So just as these groups have driven the idea of fundraising throughout history, it's not surprising to see communities continue to come together to raise funds for a common cause.

The new evolutions of community giving, however, are exciting to witness. In August 2012, Campaigns and Elections magazine estimated Barack Obama's 2012 text to donate campaign had raised over $836 thousand in small increment campaign donations. Two years later in 2014, one family's grass roots efforts to raise awareness for Lou Gehrig's disease leveraged social media to turn the "Ice Bucket Challenge" into a global phenomenon and $220 million dollars for ALS causes.

Goldie B. Floberg Center has been fortunate throughout our history to connect with charity-minded communities. This year, we witnessed two sisters drive a Crowdrise campaign to raise over $7,000 to support their brother Joey's favorite daily enrichment program, LEEP. Twice in 2016, the employees of FMA Communications directed proceeds from their quarterly employee fundraisers to Goldie B. Floberg Center.

Founded in 1970, FMA brings metal fabricators and equipment manufacturers together through technology councils, educational programs, networking events, and trade shows.

FMA employees raised funds through several creative approaches, like selling "casual (shorts or jeans) day" stickers, a taco lunch sale, an ice cream sundae social, additional cash donations, and FMA's corporate gift matching program

Later in 2016, FMA prepared to relocate their offices and held a "garage sale" of equipment and furniture. Employees "bought" these items for personal use by donating to Goldie Floberg. All together, FMA's generous community came together to donate over $2,500 in both individual and corporate matching donations in 2016.

Steve Kling, Digital Marketing Manager for FMA noted, "This was a great opportunity for everyone to win. FMA cleared out large items prior to our move, I received a good deal on shelves and cabinets, and Goldie Floberg was able to benefit as well. It feels good to know my money went to their worthwhile programs, and ultimately to the people they serve."

We at Goldie B. Floberg are grateful for every donor who feels compelled to support the Mission and the children and adults we serve. Drives like these show that as much as fundraising may evolve to reach even more donors, at its heart it remains rooted in community coming together for the greater good.

“Meaning” and the Language of Success

John Pingo, Ph.D. BCBA-D, President/CEO

22 community homes, 37 children, 41 adults, 32 day program participants...When we communicate outside our walls, executive to executive, grant seeker to foundation, we use the quantifying language which communicates the best possible picture of outcomes and achievements. This isn't just non-profit nature or professional nature, it's human nature. This is the most direct path to emphasizing our point.

Inside the figurative walls of Goldie B. Floberg Center, our mission, “to empower and enrich the lives of all people served,” may only be achieved in single digits, one person at a time. Yes, we serve children and adults with developmental disabilities. But that broad brush stroke does not paint the wide spectrum of unique abilities and challenges of each boy, girl, man, and woman we are continuously adjusting to serve. Our duty is not fulfilled by only providing safety and care.

Each of us finds our richest personal growth after we've been empowered by our support systems, like family or education. My proudest moments, when I felt most fulfilled in life, culminated from paths which I chose for myself and my own passions.

These meaningful experiences are the right of each and every one of us; and this is our philosophy of service. We must gather every resource, directors, funders, community members, behaviors specialists, DSPs—most importantly, each individual ability, interest, or “spark”—to help craft a path of meaning. Meaning is not a program, it's personal. And the closer we come to delivering this right, the further we move from a language of quantity.

Every year and every day, we seek the incremental steps towards an immeasurable outcome for every individual we serve. I love when we can't measure that kind of success.

Achievements

Number of people served who have her/his own bedroom: 65%.

This coupled with the fact that each home supports between three and four people separates us from many other service providers (with larger settings) and, above all, helps create a more personalized home that supports each person's basic need for privacy and personal space.

We doubled the number of people served who went on their own vacation last year. Travelers include Erin who went to Disney for her first ever vacation, thanks to the Dream-maker Fund; and David who achieved his first independent vacation to Indiana.

We have four adults served who are working part-time and earning at least minimum wage for the first time in their lives.

LEEP participants generated additional funds for their program though the sales of produce grown by LEEP on Center land, handmade candle crafts, jellies, candied nuts, and salsas. Participants sold these goods in their own booth at three farmer's markets within our community, earning additional income for themselves and this their program.
